Commanderie de la Bargemone featured in “20 Splendid Summer Wines — All Under $20”

By Lettie Teague - June 13, 2016

SOMETIMES EVEN serious oenophiles need a glass or two of nonserious wine. This is particularly true in the summertime, when quaffable and refreshing become more desirable qualities than complex or refined. Bottles should be priced accordingly; an easy-drinking wine should be easy to buy. I spent the past few weeks tasting a range of seasonally appropriate, delicious value bottles and found 20 reds, whites, rosés and sparklers from all over the world for under $20 a bottle — often well under, in fact.

2015 Commanderie de la Bargemone Rosé

For many wine drinkers, Provence is the only rosé address that matters, and the Commanderie de la Bargemone is one of the region’s most notable domaines. Founded by the Knights Templar in the 13th century, it’s one of the oldest, too. The estate’s pale salmon-pink wine, a traditional blend of Grenache, Syrah, Cabernet and Cinsault, is bone-dry and delicate.
